She will put one together for our consideration.

A discussion also took place regarding seeding of the land with native grasses. Narveson reported that the board favored seeding with pasture mix and then adding prairie seeds. A suggestion was made to explore having Elliot Buol continue farming the land while converting a portion of crop land to prairie each year. The cost of the seed, mowing, chemical burndown and seeding is approximately $5,000 and would be included in the 2024 Park budget.

The committee also recommends a phased approach to restoring the remaining land. Beginning in 2025 and continuing for 4 subsequent years (5 years total), 10 acres of cropland would be restored to prairie each year by creating 30-foot-wide contour prairie strips. Work would not begin until 2025 to allow for dissipation of existing herbicides. Funding would be included in the Park budget. A schematic of the planned contours would be prepared in conjunction with Buol so that he can plan his farming.
